Adrienne,

I received the following complaint from a person who wants to remain anonymous and off the record, because Mark Sanders was so threatening and irrational last week when he tried to walk his dog at the marina. [REDACTED].

Ande

On Thursday, February 16th, [REDACTED] was walking his dog up the driveway at the marina, which he had done several other times this winter. Previously, Mr. Sanders came out and told him the project is closed to the public but it was ok if he just stayed on the driveway and didn't go any further. Last Thursday, Mr. Sanders came out "like a bulldog" and told [REDACTED] to get off the property, that it is private property. [REDACTED] told Sanders that he had called the City and learned that there should be a public perimeter trail for the entire site, except where there is current construction, and there is just one place that has construction. Mr. Sanders said there "never has been and there isn't now any public access at this marina" and "it is up to my discretion whether there ever will be any available". [REDACTED] said that Sanders was disturbingly belligerent. He thought about calling the police, but he was uncertain whether he was trespassing (all of the signs say it is private.) [REDACTED] wants to know if we are doing anything about making the site safe and available to the public. [REDACTED] walks his dog (on a leash) around Pacific Shores and environs all of the time.
